

Service Package | Multi Stakeholder Workshop

" If your procurement department is struggling to gain recognition / engagement internally or is excluded from the acquisition of high value contracts then read on "

Summary

It is a struggle, with demands year on year for cost reductions without diminishing service levels. The procurement department claims it is there to help, but seems to bog people down with rule, paperwork and delays. On top of this there is never any information about what is going on even though a small fortune has been spent on IT systems.

The root of the problem lies in poor communication and lack of ownership of the changes that have to be made.

Benefiting Organisations

The workshop is run for both our public and private sector clients. It is for organisations where the pressure is on for cashable savings and efficiency gains but the procurement opportunity has either never been realised or is not even understood.

Format

A one day, double manned workshop is run with representative for all stakeholder groups, including those from finance, audit, service delivery, business planning and procurement. Issues are raised, assumptions are challenged, barriers are demolished and information exchanged. What are the problems, who owns them, what needs to happen and when, are just some of the questions answered during the day.

Outputs

- ◆ A report capturing all the outcomes from the day, ownership, actions and our independent recommendations
- ◆ A presentation of the findings to the senior management team - or at a client nominated level
- ◆ Skills and knowledge transfer - SPS appreciates you must own the problems if they are to be solved

Costs

This is delivered for £6,000 plus VAT. Additional one day workshops are delivered at the rate of £2,000 each plus VAT.

The Comprehensive Spending Review 2007 (CSR07) challenges councils to up their game in a tight fiscal environment. Local government is facing rising public expectations and increasing demand for many local services. This calls for strong and innovative approaches to achieving efficiency, including through strategic commissioning and procurement.
